Novel study: 4 whole weeks of lessons of English learning at a distance based on Matilda by Roald Dahl. The nations in the game scripts, the writing of recipes and the description. Matilda is one of those novels that never ages, is loved by children and adults equally and provides a great opportunity to explore many different types of text. Perfect so that as long as it is at the closure due to Covid and Quarentine, this package together to make sure that this world can be taught despite the fact that we are not in the classroom of the NIVOLting, a scripthy of Virtual "disgusting children, a virtual work" is a virtual reproduction guide that can be used for a live presentation of zoom or pre -recorded videos published together to show itself as a projection party to satisfy the need for learning activities to Distance in line. 10 characters of approximately 20-25 minutes of execution time "Revoltng Children, a virtual work" was inspired by the Broadway musical, Matilda, and it is the story of a class gathering for the first time in her new virtual school. It is the first day of the school in line and Mrs. Photo Cortes a: Netflix/Disney Plus/Fx/HBO Max We have had a lot of time in our hands during the last year. With the restaurants closed, meetings with friends and loved ones not advisable, discharged trips and non -existent live performances, especially during the first months of pandemic, certain types of pop culture, such as books,  ilbumes and television programs , they have been some of the only ways to escape reality and entertain us. There are titles that we cannot dissociate from the first time we consume them in the middle of Pandemic times. Some of the best television programs attributed during the people of the Hulu Pandemia launched just at the end of April of the past year to help us kill time and serve as a form of in excess. The Lightning and off relationship of Connell and Marianne not only made us cry ugly, but also remembered the fragility and complexity of love. Photo Cortesia: Netflix Lovecraft Country, an appropriate supernatural supernatural Set in the 1950s, she came to HBO at the end of the summer to remind us of the horrors of sunset cities, segregated buses and separate entrances for Black people. Along with that terror, he also packed all the ingredients of an adventure thriller. In October we chose to be very interested in chess, but mostly in the fashion of the 60s and 70s, thanks to the Netflix queen's shrimp. And then we returned to the comforts of Mando having to successfully solve a mission at the end of each episode of the Mandalorian. Needless to say, the child's tenderness also helped to calm our souls. In November, Kaley Cuoco proved that she is much more than a penny of the Big Bang theory by starring and producing HBO's hostess. And thanks to this international and hilarious Whodunnit thriller, we had to go from New York to Bangkok and then Rome without leaving the comfort and security of our homes. And in December we just vanished with delight at Bridgerton. We start the New Year with the Netflix thriller Lupin about a knight thief obsessed with the literary character Ars ne Lupin. The fact that the show is set in Paris and starring charismatic actor Omar Sy surely helped make this French show an international success. 2021 also brought Marvel's delicious lesson in television creativity. Wandavision. For a few months at the beginning of the pandemic, there wasn't much to see in terms of new movies. So I had to settle for renting some of the first releases of the year if I didn't get a chance to see them at a theater. The invisible man, Emma., Unexpected and onward Birds made a perfect vision at home, as did the mandatory contagion rewatch (2011), of course. Steven Soderbergh's film about a global pandemic, which has many things in common with Covid-19, had already reached the top 10 iTunes at the end of January 2020. Photo courtesy: Disney/Pixar The closure of Worldwide theatres triggered an ever-changing film calendar that has not yet fully stabilized. In addition to renting previously released movies, we could also count on Netflix for some new movies at home. The streamer released the action Extracci n starring Chris Hemsworth in April. May was the occasion of the contemporary romantic comedy The Lovebirds. In June, it came time for Spike Lee's 156-minute film about a group of Vietnam War veterans, Da 5 Bloods. And in July, Charlize Theron and Kiki Layne demonstrated how to kick ass in Gina Prince-Bythewood's action-adventure movie, The Old Guard. In July, other platforms were enthusiastic about the idea of opening films directly on streaming. And they gave us the chance to see the success of Broadway in Hamilton at Disney+ from a unique point of view. Disney+ will also offer the live-action version of Mulan in September. It was also in early September that Christopher Nolan s Tenet tried to bring back the cinematic experience on his own. The film was released exclusively in cinemas, making it impossible for most spectators to see it. John David Washington's vehicle would eventually overtake the pandemic locker. October brought Amazon s Borat Next Movie. The sequel to Sacha Baron Cohen would become instant news due to the inclusion of a very compromising sequence with former New York Mayor Rudy Giuliani. Christmas Day brought two big releases similar to what we normally see on the megaplex: the Pixar Soul animated movie and the superhero sequel Wonder Woman 1984. The pandemic also made most of the Oscar bait films of the year, "Nomadland, Minari, Promising Young Woman, The Father, The Trial of the Chicago 7, One Night in Miami, Mank, Judas and the Black Messiah", more accessible from home. Documentaries and interviews that shaped our pandemic vision When Non -fiction viewing, the first days of the pandemic were largely defined by the Netflix Tiger King Royal Ctritorium Miniseries, launched on March 20, 2020. Things not Get less strange after that. Photo courtesy: Harpo Productions/CBS In September we became obsessed with filmmaker Craig Foster's fixation with an octopus in the documentary My Octopus Teacher. And then we learned about the prevalence of voter suppression with Stacey Abram's documentary All in: The Struggle for Democracy. The arrival of the New Year made us reevaluate Britney Spears in a very different light. With Britney Spears' framing, we gained some insight into the concept of conservation and met some of the pop singer's fans who lead the #FreeBritney movement. And March 2021 was the month of just devouring Oprah's 86 minutes with Meghan and Harry: a primetime CBS special and learning from the best: Oprah Winfrey, about how to conduct a sharp and perfect interview and become a meme feeling all of a sudden. The music we couldn't stop listening to Puerto Rican rapper Bad Bunny got first place on Spotify's 2020 list as the most broadcast artist of the year. His work yhlqmdlg was also the narrowest album of last year on Spotify. But it was the song "Bolding Lights" by The Weeknd that he listened to the most. The theme has been played over 2 billion times on Spotify. And we still don't seem to be tired of it. Photo courtesy: The Weeknd The Pandemic also made us move to the pop and disco sounds of Dua Lipa's future nostalgia. Even if we've been dancing mostly for "Don't Start Now" and "Break My Heart" at home. Less inductive dance but equally definitive of pandemic times is the folklore of Taylor Swift. His songs "Cardigan" and "Exile", which Swift sings with Bon Iver, "will make you want to grab the thickest and cozy sweater from your closet, put it and place it by the fireplace While nursing a generous glass of red wine. And we couldn't leave out Paul McCartney III's McCartney, which we'll always associate with acit lop acit lop n' isivid al ,acim' noce sisirc al ,n' icazilaicos ed atlaf al ,dulas al ed sisirc al noc sodamurba odaism ed odatse someh sortoson ed a royam aL .asac ne odnaigufer opmeit racial accounts to do anything else. The former beatle managed to record this solo bum, where he sings and touches all instruments, while in Lockdown in England. The books that we had all the time to read during the pandemic fortunately, there was also time to read. You know, the last socially distanced activity. Photo Cortesia: Goodreads among the Best-Sellers of Amazon's fiction in 2020 were the small fires of Celeste Ng everywhere and Brit Bennett is half of disappearance. The popularity of NG's book, initially published in 2017, is undoubtedly linked to the captivating miniseries of Hulu, which is starring Reese Witherspoon and Kerry Washington. Bennett's historical novel, on the other hand, was also chosen as the best historical fiction book of 2020 by the Goods of Goodreads. Another favorite among Goodreads readers was Silvia Moreno-Garcia's Mexican gysteic, which gained in the best horror category. On the non -fiction side of literature, many readers sought the words of the activist professor and Boston libram X. Kendi. His book, How to Be a Antiracist, became an educational manual for many after the Black Lives Matter protests resurfaced in the United States after the murders of George Floyd and Breonna Taylor in the spring of 2020. We also bought, read the 768 pages of a promised land, the first volume of Barack Obama's presidential memories. But how many, how strange you will always associate with the memories of these strange pandemic times? Ask.com ask.com
